

Press

Laminine in the Press

If you have read our press articles in the Daily Mail and the Tatler and would like more information, please fill in the form below. We promise to call you back as soon as possible!

Call Me Back

- Full Name *
- Telephone Number *
- Email *
- Message *

Verification

- Please enter any two digits Example: 12
-

Article in Grazia Magazine

Grazia Article April 2015

Could a protein derived from a 9 day old chicken egg be the answer to all our skin and stress issues?.....Studies have shown that after regular use collagen levels are significantly boosted leaving skin looking and feeling plumper....

Article in the Daily Mail

MailOnline

Home | News | U.S. | Sport | TV & Showbiz | Australia | Parent | Health | Science | Money

Latest Headlines | Parent | Fashion Profile | Food | Parent Boards | Beauty | Controlling | Death

- Victoria Fisher, 45, from West London, says Laminine made her Crohn's disease symptoms disappear and gave her a new lease of life
- The pill contains proteins which the body needs for tissue repair
- Doctors and detractors are sceptical of its effects

By ALICE SMELLIE FOR THE DAILY MAIL
PUBLISHED: 01:12, 4 January 2016 | UPDATED: 04:03, 4 January 2016

311 shares

There's always somebody moaning about aches and pains at dinner parties. Helpful suggestions usually involve giving up sugar and alcohol.

But over the past year, the well-heeled and well-bred are murmuring about quite another solution over the roast beef.

It's the high-society supplement known as Laminine, a proprietary one-a-day tablet, produced by a U.S. company, that costs just under £1 a day and contains the amino acids - or proteins - that the body needs for vital processes such as tissue building and repair.

Scroll down for video

Daily Mail 2016

Devotees insist it calms, eases menopause symptoms and cures insomnia.

Read more >>